

OBPI Offers Network Security and Privacy Liability Options to Lawyers' Professional Liability Coverage

Information systems are the lifeblood of today's law firms. Litigation information, intellectual property, client data, trade secrets and personally identifiable information are among the confidential information that represent high-value targets for hackers. That's why network security and privacy (NSP) liability coverage should be an essential component of an overall lawyers' professional liability insurance package. OBPI is pleased to announce that network security and privacy liability coverage is now available to our insureds in two ways: either as an endorsement to our LPL policy, or as stand alone coverage.

As an Endorsement to the LPL policy: In the event of a data breach, this endorsement will provide coverage for certain expenses incurred for first party notification or public relations efforts to minimize the damage to a firm's reputation.

As full coverage (separate NSP policy) we have the flexibility to design a tailored program to fit the needs of an organization. The coverage can include:

- Breach Consultation Services
- Network Security Liability
- Privacy Liability
- Website Media Occurrence Liability
- Business Interruption
- Breach Notification Costs Sub-limit
- Breach Management Expenses Sub-limit
- Regulatory Claim Sub-limit
- Extortion Threat Sub-limit
- Forensic Expenses Sub-limit

For additional information on how the NSP endorsement can provide valuable protection for your clients, please contact your Lawyers' Professional Liability underwriter or Kim Noble, Senior Vice President for OBPI's LPL Division at knoble@onebeaconpro.com.

For additional information on the NSP stand alone policy, please contact your Network Security and Privacy underwriter or David Molitano, Vice President of OBPI's Content, Technology and Services Division at dmolitano@onebeaconpro.com.
